Song of the sacrifice of the seventh Sabbath on the sixteenth of the month.

Praise the El of the lofty heights, O you lofty ones among all the elim of knowledge. Let the holiest of the malachim sanctify the King of Esteem who sanctifies by holiness all His set-apart ones. O you chiefs of the praises of all the malachim, praise the splendidly praiseworthy El. For in the splendor of praise is the esteem of His realm. From it comes the praises of all the malachim together with the splendor of all His majesty. And exalt his exaltedness to the exalted highest skies, you most high thrones of the lofty elim, and exalt His esteemed divinity above all the lofty heights.

For He is El Elohim of all the chiefs of the heights of the sky and Sovereign of Sovereigns of all the eternal councils by the intention of His knowledge. At the words of His mouth, all lofty malachim come into being; at the utterance of His lips all the ageless spirits; by the intention of His knowledge all His creatures in their undertakings. Sing with joy, you who rejoice in His knowledge with rejoicing among the wondrous malachim. And chant His esteem with the tongue of all who chant with knowledge; and chant His wonderful songs of joy with the mouth of all who chant of Him. For He is El of all who rejoice in knowledge ha olam and Judge in His power of all the spirits of understanding.
